BECOMES POPULAR

Its Kind in Any Marion School

Continued from Page One. the school in returning to their bomes at noon during winter weather. It was planned to also do away with the cold lunch forced upon many pupils who lived at such a distance that they could not go home in the noon

So far the cafeteria idea bas worked splendidly according to members of the Parent-Teachers' association.

One of the desirable features of the cafeteria is the price charged for lunch. The present price is 10 cents. For this price pupils are given a glass of milk or cup of cocou, sandwiches and one or two hot dishes. If the anpetite demands it other items may be obtained at slightly extra cost. Many of the pupils, nowever, especially those in the lower grades are satisfied with the 10-cent lunch, members of the association say. No Profit Planued

The Parent-Teachers essociation is not operating the cafeteria with a view to making money in fact the establishment is not paying its way at present. But once the new equipment is paid for it is expected that the price of the lunch will pay for food supplies and other penses. Since members of the association donate their services the cost is materially reduced. Members of the associaton run the kitchen while girls of the high school aid in serving.

Members of the association soon found that they had undertaken no small job when they first took up the cafeteria propesal. The first problem was to find a place to put it. An unusde storeroom selved the kitchen problem. A little remodeling and several liberal coafs of paint turned the storeroom into an airy and well-lighted kitchen. A Scout room serves has a dining room for beys of the high school while another large basement room is used for a dining room for other pupils. Financing Plan

The finding of space for the cafeteria, however, did not begin to solve all the problems. There was the question of financing the project. Members of the association concluded that they would need about $700 to faunch the idea. They also resolved not to ask their bushands for a penny. Instead they raised the money through individual effort. The Reverend Father Spickerman, aiding the project, offered a prize to the member who raised her portion of the money in the most unique manner. The prize will probably go to the member who charges her husband a dime for shaving his neck or to the one who charges for pressing her husband's trousers.

In due time the money was raised, or at least enough to launch the project. Equipment, including stores, dishes and other articles were bought, and the cafeteria for St. Mary's parochial school pupils became a reality.

It is possible that some of the twelve, unusually susceptible to such influences, died as the result of breathing some atustve, but slow-acting, poison which retained its deadliness for a time after the tomb was opened. This is a mere possibility, but it is more than probable, it is manifest, that worry over the curse did hasten the deaths of several of those who had some tieup with the tomb's desecration.
